Today's paraprofessionals – who number upwards of 250,000 nationwide – play an increasingly prominent role in the instruction of students with disabilities. (Annual Report to Congress, 2000). This is very evident in the public schools of Nebraska. Paraprofessionals provide support to students that is imperative to their success. Attending workshops specifically designed for the paraprofessional, provides the opportunity for networking, sharing of strategies and ideas, and introduction to new strategies.

This workshop is designed to be interactive, and to review the roles of the Paraprofessional. The specific needs of students with visual impairments and additional disabilities will be discussed, along with strategies to use in functional and academic settings.

The workshop will be led by Donna Hultman, M.Ed., Consultant at NCECBVI. Donna has forty years of experience working in the field of Special Education/Visual Impairments. She currently provides Outreach services across the state of Nebraska.
